Atlanta, GA (BizHWY) August 4, 2009 - In today's fast-paced society, it has become more challenging than ever to find long-lasting relationships. For discerning, successful and private individuals, having photos and personal profiles displayed on the Internet is not an appealing option. And meeting "the one" by chance in social situations can be next to impossible.

"At Sterling Introductions, we understand the unique position of singles working in the medical field," explained Ulrike Eitel, President & CEO of Sterling Introductions. "Demanding schedules and long hours are obstacles for busy individuals searching for their life partners."

"If you are used to achieving your goals in your professional life, you should expect the same personally, said Eitel. "All introductions are facilitated based on a deep personal understanding of each member's unique personality and requirements in a life partner. I travel to New York, Chicago, Florida, Texas and California on a regular basis and many of my members love to visit Atlanta."

"Our members are exceptional individuals who realize that working with a professional matchmaking service is not a weakness, but a sign of strength and emotional maturity," stated Eitel.

Typical male members of Sterling Introductions matchmaking service are successful and accomplished professionals at the height of their career or retired individuals. They may travel frequently, both nationally and internationally, enjoy a rich lifestyle and are selective connoisseurs.

Sterling Introductions' female members are exceptionally attractive, in excellent shape, intelligent, classy and self-confident. They are beautiful inside and out, poised, alluring and emotionally stable. They are sincere about finding meaningful and lasting relationships.

Ulrike Eitel is the President and CEO of Sterling Introductions, the nation's most exclusive upscale matchmaking service, headquartered in the heart of Atlanta's prestigious Buckhead district.
