

Warren Wealth Management, Helping Retirees With Income Needs

Warren Wealth Management, St. Louis, MO., celebrates its one year anniversary in helping individuals and small businesses with their financial goals.

St. Louis, MO (BizHWY) March 12, 2010 - Founded by President and investment adviser representative, Jacob Warren, his focus has been on becoming a trusted advisor to his clients in the areas wealth accumulation, retirement income solutions, and estate planning.

Jacob has been an advisor for nearly a decade educating and servicing clients in the Missouri and western Illinois communities. Working as an independent financial advisor with broker-dealer, Woodbury Financial Services, Inc., Jacob decided to brand his business in February 2009 and start Warren Wealth Management.

Advising clients of all demographics, Jacob cites there is one definite obstacle that is faced by everyone - Will I have enough to retire comfortably? Although many people save for retirement, most don't have the answers to "How much will I need?" and "Will it last my entire life?" According to Jacob, the latter question is the biggest on the minds of the baby boomer generation. There is a dire need for retirees to know where their income is going to come from and how to keep it from depleting. That doesn't even broach the question whether retirees wish to leave a legacy behind to children, grandchildren, or a favorite charity.

The good news is that people now have real options. Often it means tweaking your current portfolio to provide more income on a monthly basis. Other times, it may mean getting your hands dirty and really looking at the possible solutions that are out there. One way or another, it isn't something that can be ignored any longer by retirees.
