McAllen, TX (BizHWY) May 11, 2012 - A local McAllen Roofing Company has been helping homeowners and property owners get a new roof over their heads after the hail storm that hit on March 29th, 2012.

The damages from a violent storm that rocked the city on Thursday, April 29, could exceed $100 million dollars, according to the National Weather Service.

Baseball-sized hail pounded the northern end of McAllen and the storm dumped 4.37 inches of rain. Local schools were shut down, trees were stripped of their leaves and almost six inches of hail accumulated in some areas reported the National Weather Service.

Once the winds died down, the flash floods receded and power returned to 25,000 customers, huge damages still remained. Thousands of auto and home insurance claims have been filed as of April 1. Roofs are some of the hardest hit surfaces; hail damage can severely impact the lifespan of the materials and the safety of the inhabitants inside.

Fortunately, hail damage is considered an "Act of God" and is covered by most insurance providers. Because roof damage can't be seen from the ground, a trained expert needs to go up on your roof to examine the roofing material.

"We have been doing this for hundreds of homeowners and have found substantial damage to most roofs. We will help contact your insurance company and ensure that you get the proper repair and insurance settlement that you deserve," said Jeff Andrews with McAllen Roofing Company.

While insurance companies may send swarms of adjusters to high damage areas like McAllen, these companies have a for-profit agenda. They are infamous for disputing the cause of damage or the extent of existing damages.

"We are familiar with the insurance companies tactics that they may use to try to dispute the cause of damage. We also know that some adjusters may not be familiar with storm damage. We will physically show them exactly what the hail damage looks like right there on your roof," said Jeff Andrews.

With over 11 years of roofing experience, McAllen Roofing Company is your best choice to getting your roof back to pre-storm condition. They are dedicated to each and every customer and strive to ensure your house or property is restored to a maximum value condition.
